⇒ Mt. McKinley is commonly referred to by native Alaskans as Denali, which is the name currently recognized by the State of Alaska. When Denali National Park and Preserve was established in 1980, the Alaska Board of Geographic Names changed the name of the mountain back to Denali.

⇒ The U.S. Board on Geographic Names maintains the name McKinley, ostensibly to help visitors avoid confusion between the mountain and the park. Use of the name "McKinley" remains common, particularly in the Lower 48; however, Alaskans and mountaineers generally use the name "Denali" to refer both to the park and to the mountain.
